With Six Service Stations Located At 150 Minot Ave., 256 Court St. And 61 Broad St., Auburn, Post Office Square, Junction Turner, Hampshire, Knight And Cushing Sts., And 72 Cedar St. And 226 Main St., Corner Main And Middle Sts., Lewiston, Feature Tydol Gas, Veedol Oil, Crank Case Service, Lubrication And Specializing In The New Tydol Anti-Knock Gas—Always Drive In To The Nearest Jimmy Gas Station Near You—One On Every Road Leading Into Town.

You many have been idling along the road but when approaching the city and you see the glare of the lights, the heavy traffic, the street signals and the traffic cops it is best to look over the instrument board and stop at one of the Jimmy Gas Stations and get the car filled with gas, oil and water.

They are able to give you just what you want as they have a large station and can furnish you with gas for the high compression engine that will make it full of pep. If your engine has been spitting and coughing they will be able to give you gasoline that will make it run smoothly and there will be no danger of you getting stopped in a traffic jam. The heavy congestion takes more gasoline and it never pays to run into the city with a small supply as stops are costly and you may hear the last cough of a dying engine just when you need power the most to get through. If you take on gasoline at their station your engine will hum along and you will not be bothered or inconvenienced. They have sufficient force of helpers so that you will not be delayed.

The oil department is complete with oils and greases for all purposes. They know the chart and will give of that will protect your engine and you will not be burning out connecting rods or having engine trouble. I might be well to take a supply home with you so there will be no trouble until you get around again. They have oils for every type of motor, tractor and truck as well as the motorcycle. They offer an excellent service in the draining of the crankcase and seeing that you have clean oil that will pump easily.

In making this review we are pleased to compliment The Jimmy Gas Stations upon their service and would suggest that every driver should stop at one and refuel to keep up on the improvements in the service stations "service supreme."

J. F. Bell & Sons Co., of Berlin, conduct one of the leading trading centers in this section of the country and are headquarters for people from many miles around.

One of the recognized principles of farming along scientific lines to-day is the raising of good horses. It is because of the excellent service and the desirable market afforded by such houses as that operated by this well known firm that this feature is receiving more attention from the farmer of today and progress along this line is particularly noticeable in this community where the producer knows that he will receive the highest prices for his horses.

The J. F. They offer a most complete service, having all the room necessary to keep all horses and mules until sold. Feed is provided for the animals and they are kept under cover and shown to the best advantage.

The reputation of this house for fair and above board methods has brought it an ever increasing patronage from all over the surrounding territory. People recognize that this is by far the best method to dispose of stock and thus their popularity is ever on the increase. It takes a long time to find a buyer by personal sale and here there is always someone ready to pay cash on the spot. It attracts buyers from all over the country to the city.

Just call over the phone, drop or write in and get on the list and they will see that you get the latest information on quotations and the general drift of the market.

They offer an excellent wholesaler and retail service in ice and are always ready to give the best of service. You can always get ice if you drive up to their place.

Terms—Stores At Lewiston, Rumford, Berlin And Livermore.

The New England Furniture Company of Lewiston has one of the largest lines of furniture to be found in this section of the country and here is represented all that is good in furniture craftsmanship since the renaissance.

In the primeval days when the settler hewed his home from the forest and built his furniture from slabs there was little use for the modern furniture store, but with the growing complexity of our civilization and the fact that all classes of people are becoming more or less discriminating the demand for furniture of quality and the highest craftsmanship and art is more acute.

Here at this store can be seen the work of the masters in furniture designing, craftsmanship and building. They have a complete line of reproductions of the famous periods after the renaissance when art in all its lines flourished and then they have a fine line of the distinctively American, the Colonial, which is always in vogue in the states. They are able to offer you complete service in the way of mapping out your furnishings to harmonize and can give your home the cast of any period you desire. Their furniture is all well built and will stand for years and become family heirloom.

A line of excellent rugs is carried. They are very artistic and the colorings charm and delight the eye. The people in charge of the department are familiar with the business and can tell you exactly what you need to match up with your surroundings and to make your home livable and attractive.

The credit department of the store is another feature worthy consideration. You do not need to have all the money. If you desire a charge account just step in and talk to them and it can be arranged. Everything in this department is strictly confidential.

They offer a most accommodating and intelligent service. They will aid you in the selection and the lines they feature they have very best from which to make selection.

In making this review we are glad to compliment this well known store upon their excellent stock and their accommodating service.

Robert A. Carter, 32-year-old hard worker of Larchmont, N. Y., hit upon a sure-fire plan for getting stories published and paid for. Unwilling to risk the unsure rewards of grindstone out-adventure tales for paper pulp magazines, mailing and remailing them to apathetic editors, he decided to model his compositions after successful stories already printed. Not only did he set about copying these as to sense, but as to content, letter perfect.

Apprentice Plagiariast Carter con ned periodicals, selected a daring yarn from "Air Trails," fiction monthly. Last July, he sold it, typ uted under the name "Fiction Plagi ing," to Fiction House, Inc., Man hattan publishers of the magazine "Wings." By similar ruse he had managed to extract $1,100 from the company.

All went well until the publisher of "Air Trails" called "Wings" at tention to the fact that it was re printing copyrighted fiction. The mulcted monthly immediately offered Plagiariast Carter's arrest. After his apprehension, it was discovered that fiction fleching was the most re munerative, but not the exclusive manner of his making a living. Two Manhattan hotels had $850 worth of band bills against him.

Convicted on the charge of petty larceny, Plagiariast Carter was sen tenced to serve not less than six months, nor more than three years in the penitentiary.

Donnell Indian Remedies Which Have Brought Relief And Good Results To Many People Using Them—Write In For Symptom Blank And Your Case Will Be Diagnosed Free Of Charge—Have A Complete Line Of Home Remedies That Are On Sale At All Drug Stores.

In the distant past of the human race, the cave-man had certain instinctive sense of what benefited his health. When he felt ill, he instinctively ate certain plants that he knew in some mysterious way, would benefit him.

With the advent of our modern civilization and all its glories, certain disadvantages have also come in. We have lost that ancient instinct, and in addition due to hazards of modern life in the machine age disorders unknown or uncommon to ancient man have sprung up.

Illnesses are more and more common with the artificial conditions under which we live. Realizing this state of affairs, The Indian Remedy Company of Lewiston undertook a serious investigation of the problem and evolved formulas of Indian Remedies which may be used with very good effects in many disorders.

The formula from which their Indian Remedies are manufactured have been tried and tested; today they are in the first place in the medicine cabinet of many households. As the first sign of illness administered the remedy which is suitable; you will find it will effectually check the progress of the disorder and act like a way almost miraculous.

They also offer a diagnosis service by mail which is very helpful to men who are unable to get into town. If you write them they will send you a comprehensive symptom blank and upon your filling it out and returning it to them will diagnose your case free of charge.

A whole-hearted devotion to the good of one's fellow-man is rightly said to be one of the noblest attributes of the human being; in presenting these Indian Remedies to the public the originators and manufacturers deserve the utmost praise.

In a review of the business interests of the section there is no one concern more worthy of mention than The Lewiston Monumental Works which is considered an authority on present day memorials.

Their plant in Lewiston is of modern style with complete apparatus and all carving and tracing is thus accomplished with the utmost accuracy and in a most artistic manner. As new improvements come out and are approved by the trade they are immediately adopted here and thus the work is kept thoroughly up-to-date.

They are turning out work all the time and keep a full line of the standard designs on hand. In addition they will design anything you may suggest or will offer suggestions until they are able to give you exactly what you want.

As a part of their service they will be pleased to look over your cemetery lot, offer suggestions as to the character of memorial they think best suited to the size and location, taking into consideration the number of burials spaces required, have their architectural department prepare sketches embodying your own ideas and submit these sketches for your consideration, without placing you under obligation.

A special feature of the work is the fact that they use only the best of marble and granite. A great many places offer memorials somewhat cheaper than here, but you will know then that their memorials are probably made of poor stone and will disintegrate rapidly. The Lewiston Monumental Works build their monuments to last forever, so that centuries, not years, will wear them down; for this reason they use only the best granite and marble.

In making this review we are pleased to compliment The Lewiston Monumental Works and refer their excellent service to our readers.

C. H. McKenzie Co.

Located At 87 Congress St., Rum- ford, Feature Women's And Chil- dren's Wear, Accessories And Many Specialties—A Store That Makes Rumford A Live Shopping Center And Brings Much Trade Activity To The Vicinity.

Prominent among the concerns that have aided in the expansion and growth of their home city and vicin- ity by giving the public metropolitan service and quality is this popular store. This establishment is thoroughly up-to- date and the many departments are replete with the modes of the hour in the various materials and shades which have been approved by the world's leading arbiters of fashion. No sooner has any style been accepted by the leading fashion authorities of the nation than it at once makes an appearance in the store and is presented in a variety of materials for the choice of the people of this section.

In the ready-to-wear department will be found all the styles and ma- terials in popular vogue today among the well dressed women, and the more conservative of the modish garments that have met with uni- versal approval. As regards price, you will find that these garments which hang in graceful and becom- ing lines are offered at most rea- sonable figures, for while this store enjoys the patronage of the leading ladies of the community it is the most popular store within many miles among people of every walk of life.

They feature children's clothing. They have garments for the child of every age. They dress them from the cradle to maturity, and after that they come back to buy clothes in the adult departments.

It is quite fitting and proper then that in this issue we compliment C. H. McKenzie Company upon the successful and satisfactory store and high-grade stock and service main- tained. Geo. Belisle

Located On Switzerland Rd., French Cemetery, Is A Designer And Builder Of Better Class Memorials And Offers People Of This Part Of Maine A Vast Stock Of Monuments, From Which To Make Selections—Has The Best Equipment—He Uses The Very Best Of Marbles And Granites And Offers The Highest Class Of Artistry In The Production Of High Grade Memorials.

Geo. Belisle of French Cemetery enjoys the distinction of being one of the leading authorities on memorials in this section of the country and is known for many miles around.

The yards and works are stocked with the leading granites and marbles. The shops are equipped for the pro- duction of work both large and small. The men employed here are more than mere carvers of these stones but are artists in this line and all the work has the stamp of the real artist. They are able to artistically re- produce any design that one may have in mind or will submit original designs that will be in keeping with the size of the work desired. On hands at all times is a large collection of memorials that can be purchased and will be erected on a few days' notice.

The placing of memorials over the graves of the dead is a custom that originated with our early civilization. In Egypt it was the custom for the Pharaohs to erect a pyramid during their lifetime so that when the final summons came a place was prepared for their reception. Notable ex- amples of this were the famous py- ramids of Rameses and King Tut. Their thoughtfulness has preserved to us a record of the civilization of the past centuries. In America every man is a king and the head of every family should see that a suitable memorial is placed for the family which he heads so that it will be in place and if financial adversity should come to his descendants the proper provision has been made for the preservation of the name of the family.

In making this review we are glad to compliment him as conducting an institution that is truly aiding in the preservation of records and achievements of the people of today—ones that will stand through the years and inform the future gener- ations of the pioneer families of this great commonwealth.

Every motorist should occasionally have the ignition system checked. While you may still be running yet many do not detect that there may be trouble on the road. The points, the battery and wiring as well as the timing should be gone over by an expert occasionally. These gradually get out of order and the driver does not often notice it until there is a complete shutdown. An occasional checking over will save much trouble.

In the repair department they have mechanics who are able to look after all phases of automobile repair- ing. In the olden days motoring was a hazardous and doubtful pleasure be- cause if the motorist strayed far from home and his car suddenly went into a swoon and refused to run further there was little he could do about it save attempt to fix it himself and it was a frequent sight to see a motorist in a flowing yellow duster spotted with grease savagely tinkering with the mysteries of an engine he did not understand to the tune of the soul searing chorus "Git a Hoss" which was sung by small boys and village wits who would quickly gather in a cluster about the discomfited motorist and his car.

Today however all this has chang- ed. Engineering of modern motor cars has advanced rapidly but even more rapidly has the service garage advanced in efficiency, convenience, accuracy and rapidity of service and to commend them because of this advance is well illustrated by the service of such establishments as Richard's Garage.

Eliot W. Reed

With Offices At 197 Summer St., Auburn, Is An Optometrist—Ex- perience And The Best Of Training Render Him Capable Of Correcting The Most Delicate Of All Organs, The Eyes—Office Hours 9 To 6; Evenings By Appointment—Was Formerly With The Largest Op- tical Co. On Lisbon St. For 20 Years.

In these days of continual stress and nerve strain, optometry is one of the professions most vital to our well being, and among the optome- trists of this section none enjoy a higher reputation than Eliot W. Reed.

Under the conditions of modern life the eyes are subjected to a vast amount of work for which nature never intended them, and as a conse- quence there are today many troubles rising from eye-strain which were un- heard of a generation ago. Many people imagine that the eyes are al- right as long as they can see well, but this is quite a mistake. Good vision is sometimes secured at the expense of so much nerve energy that the whole system suffers as a conse- quence. Some eye troubles are re- lieved by glasses and others do not need glasses. Many troubles arise from a lack of co-ordination between the two eyes and these can often be put right without glasses. Even "cross-eyes" so long considered hope- less, can now be straightened without operation, by modern optometry methods. Mr. Reed assures us he has straightened many cases of cross eyes, both in children and adults. Thousands of school children are held back in their work and others suffer in various ways when the whole trouble lies in the eyes. There are also many people who had per- fect eyes to begin with, who now find that the eyes tire and ache after a little reading or sewing. Then again headache, dizziness, nerve troubles, stomach trouble, etc., often come from eye-strain. All these cases should have a thorough eye examina- tion, and here is where optometry comes in.

The optometrist is the only man specially trained for this work. He is therefore the real sight specialist. With his modern scientific instru- ments he is able to make a thorough examination of the eyes, without the use of "drops." The offices of Eliot W. Reed are fully equipped with these scientific instruments, and he is thoroughly skilled in mod- ern optometric methods. He is able to render a complete service, so that if glasses are needed it is not necessary to go to another place to have them fitted. His pre- fers to attend to the fitting him- self, and thus makes sure that his patient gets the proper results from his prescription.

In making this review of our progress we are glad to compliment Eliot W. Reed upon the high standing he enjoys in the profession- al and business world and to refer him to all our readers.

RIVIERA GAMBLERS SIGHT PROSPERITY

Build New Casinos for the Expected Rush.

Paris.—In adversity the bacaret barons of the golden sands of the French and Italian Riviera are preparing for prosperity just around the corner.

The gambling casinos are having the worst season they have had since the war. Little white five franc chips are used where formerly hardened plungers fingered only the 1,000 franc red chips. Yet the barons have found the hundreds of millions necessary to build three new gambling palaces.

There are at present 22 gambling casinos along the 100-mile strip from San Remo to Hyeres, as well as three racetracks where plungers and bookmakers swear. The combined capacity of the gambling tables of these 22 casinos is 32,000.

In good years the tables have been populated from noon until dawn with as many as 500,000 gamblers trying their luck at one of the 800 tables during a day. At the present time it is no rare sight to see two croupiers and only one gambler.

For the happy days to come, however, the barons are making ready. At Monte Carlo a new $1,000,000 casino is being built in the shadow of the famed old casino on the rock.

Monte Carlo is so small that you can walk its length in five minutes, yet it has three casinos already and a fourth under way. The new one will be called the International Sporting Club and will be the most luxurious gambling place in the world. Bacaret players will tread on rare oriental carpets, the walls will glitter with real gold and the ceiling will be movable and open to the sky.

Another luxurious "sporting club" also is being built along the Croisette at Cannes. The only sports which will be indoor sports—polo, bridge, bacaret and chemin de fer. This will put one new palace on each side of the $5,000,000 gambling factory which Frank Jay Gould built at Nice.

World Is Now Inhabited by Two Billion People

Washington.—The world is inhabited by approximately two billion people, or 30.2 persons for every square mile of land on the earth, according to Commerce department figures compiled for 1923.

Only official statistical publications of the 103 countries surveyed were used by the department in the first compilation of this kind ever made.

Data gathered indicated that females greatly outnumber males throughout the world. Fifty-one out of every 100 persons in the United States are, however, males.

The United States with a land area of 3,777,770 square miles and an estimated population of more than 121,000,000, has a density of 31.5 persons per square mile. Alaska was the smallest density of any country listed, with 0.1 per cent.

Town in New England Votes to Pass Up Tax

Orleans, Vt.—The folks who said there were two things one couldn't evade—death and taxes—were only half right.

This village of 1,300 inhabitants has voted to make no tax levy for 1932. Orleans thus becoming the only taxless community in New England.

With a balance of $12,000 in the treasury, town officials figured there was enough to carry on for another year without burdening the citizens.

Seek Divorce; Nat Wed

Vancouver, Wash.—When Walter and Pearl Priddy sought a divorce they discovered they never were legally married. They immediately obtained a license and were married.

Girls! You're Doomed After You Reach 27

San Francisco.—Girls who wait until they are past twenty-seven to marry are likely to remain spinsters for the rest of their lives.

That is the theory of Caydonish Moran, M. A., consulting psychologist, who has made a study of marriage here for the last ten years.

"Between the ages of twenty-two and twenty-seven, a girl is at her best," he said. "She reaches the full bloom in physical and mental development. She can choose her husband from the group of men between the ages of twenty-eight and thirty-three, the usual marrying period for men."

"If she waits until after twenty-seven she is apt to find the men of her own age or a few years older already married. As a rule, younger men will not be interested in her."

Moran said he believed the underlying cause for unhappiness in modern marriage is the tendency of the times for individualism.

"Marriage is easy when every body has the same tastes, manners and beliefs," he said. "It becomes dangerous for the emancipated woman and individualized man of today. A hunt for perfection is a trap for the irresponsible."

UPSIDE DOWN LADY CURED BY DOCTORS

Extraordinary Case Reported in London Lancet.

London.—The extraordinary case of a woman who spelled backward and read books and drew pictures upside down is recorded in the current Lancet, British medical journal, by Dr. R. Eager and Dr. J. W. Fisher of the Devon Mental hospital.

After a cure by hypnosis the woman found that she was unable to read passages which she had written before her treatment.

The woman, a house servant in Devonshire, was subject to such trembling of the hands that she broke more than the usual number of cups and saucers. After an illness she was committed to the hospital for examination. She had previously been classed as a congenital mental defective.

In the hospital, failure of speech necessitated her writing her wants on a slate, but the nurses could not understand the script. Each word was written backward, though put down from left to right in the customary manner, and with the right hand. The letters were correctly oriented, though in reverse sequence.

Thus, requested to write "police-man," she put down "namelap"; for "Devon" she spelled "Noved"; all words were similarly reversed.

In mathematics, she wrote all the figures upside down, and did the same thing in drawing elementary objects like dogs, cats and houses. In cleaning up a room she turned pictures and vases upside down.

After certain tests of vision based on the theory that the psychic power which had temporarily deprived her of speech had upset the coordination of other closely related centers of the brain, the physician put the patient under light hypnosis.

The cure seems to have been complete, and the woman has spent a large part of her time lately writing normal letters to her friends, ridiculing her previous eccentricities.

Gypsy Bands Use Autos for Their Wanderings

Jefferson City, Mo.—Modernism is invading the ranks of gypsies, who are heeding the call of spring and the open road.

Missouri still knows the nomads, and many of their traditional characteristics remain. But the picturesque covered wagons and other makeshift modes of travel are yielding to up-to-date transportation modes.

Many of the roving bands are traveling the highways this year in automobiles, some of them late and expensive models. Bright colored shawls are about the only remnant of the flaring dress of bygone days, as women and men alike have adopted modish garb of the day.

These traveling caravans are already attracting to Nelson, particularly in the southern part of the state where the rugged Ozark country is fitting setting. This movement is regarded in many communities as the first true sign of spring.

Fortune telling, vending of shawls and other trinkets and kindred activity is still the foremost industry in the communities frequented by gypsies.

Their campfires still flicker, but for the most part are reflected in the glittering surface of automobiles instead of alighting on the canvas covers of earlier years.

Pumice Find May Mean Riches for Retired Cop

Napa, Calif.—Pumice deposits found on his ranch near here may bring riches to James Pearl, sixty-six, retired San Francisco detective sergeant.

Pearl retired in 1920, after 33 years of service. He became known as "Million Dollar Jim" after recovering $500,000 in stolen automobiles during the World's fair in 1915.

"Grinds" No Better Than Grid Heroes

Berkeley, Calif.—Big, brawny football heroes may carry off more of the desirable coeds and glory during their college years, but they don't do it so well as the "grinds" later nor do they live as long.

This was the conclusion reached recently by Robert Kibbey, executive manager of the University of California Alumni association, following study of records of 12 athletes and 12 members of the Phi Beta Kappa, scholarship fraternity. All were graduated from California 30 years ago.

Of the Phi Beta Kappas, 10 were still living and all had been listed in Who's Who. Only one of the athletes had achieved Who's Who, and three were dead.

Ridiculed
After electing the Long parliament, Cromwell called together a new parliament, or more properly a convention, summoning, so far as he might, only religious, God-fearing men. The "little parliament," as it is sometimes called, consisted of 155 members, mainly religious zealots, who spent much of their time in Scripture exegesis, prayer and exhortation. Among them was a London leather merchant nicknamed "Praise-God" Barclay, who was especially given to these exercises. The name amused the people, and as the exhorter was a fair representative of a considerable section of the convention, they nicknamed it "Barclay's parliament," by which designation it has passed into history.

The Worm Turns
An Indian, seen in Oklahoma, hard up, went to the bank to borrow $100. The banker said it would be all right, provided he had some security. The deal finally was made, the Indian giving a mortgage on his ponies.

Not long after that all was struck close to the Indian's allotment, and he sold his oil lease for a lot of cash, so stepped into the bank and peeled off a $100 bill to pay the loan.

"That's fine," remarked the banker, when the business was completed, "but you don't want to carry all that money around with you. Better leave it here with me."

"All right," replied the redskin; "how many times you got?"—Carpenter's Weekly.

The Ring

BY JANNIS PARKER

(WNU Service)

SHE lay on the Indian blanket she had bought from an old squaw in Reno, slid the slim wedding-band from her right hand to the left hand then back again, thereby confusing the man, hidden in the sumac, who watched her avidly.

His painter eyes loved the set. A grove picketed by tall trees, a willow girl in white reclining on a bright blanket.

He completed the picture, he with his shock of jet hair against the flaming sumac, his bright blue eyes riveted spellbound on the unsuspecting girl. Under the sustained pressure of his moccasined foot a twig snapped. The girl swung around. They stared, their tense faces shattered only by a startled blue-day screaming through the woods.

"I thought you were in Europe," she spoke in a throaty monotone, her creamy cheeks and neck hotly tinged. "I'm not." The man stepped from behind the sumac, softly tread the thickly packed pine-needles. "Nor am I shadowing you. I thought you were in Reno."

"I was."

There was an awkward pause. "Can't we reminisce awhile? It can't be called collusion now that we're nicely divorced."

She hesitated. "What is there to reminisce about?"

"I can think of something," planting himself squarely on the blanket. "First, who told you I'd gone abroad?"

"Andy." She chose a tiny corner of the quilt.

"So you still see him?" he snapped. "Don't be ridiculous, Ronald. Andy is my adopted brother."

"He forgot that," he retorted, past events. "All right—the man loved you—he couldn't help it. But he could have helped looking after it! He with his head in the clouds, training and hunting him on me! Then reading you all you saw things that weren't there. Why did you ask his advice? If you wanted to lose me, why didn't you tell me?"

She laughed. "By the way, I haven't received your announcement. The man was in place."

"Yes, and it's a good one," she explained. "You and I are married. Long for him and the best back in the country. You said so yourself."

"Little Andy?" The man roared up at the clouds. "How can you pretend such a thing? I never have got drunk with you. Why the hell, looking straight at me when Andy told you around by that funny little nose? Andy was a lawyer, darling, you shouldn't have believed all he said. Didn't he just tell you I'd gone to Asia?"

No answer.

"Because he wanted you himself he imported a fabric of lies to hold over your vision and distort it. He picked his time when I was slaving on that fence order, spending every minute with my model! You should have been your usual self and risked an unknown publisher doesn't risk orders like that every day."

"You might have let me know when you found me back to the world's other women."

"What do you mean?"

"What if you were to let a fellow know when you're through with him? When the matrimonial bond is severed shouldn't an impressive document go forth? Suppose I had wanted to marry Gertrude?"

"Never mind," he continued tenderly, his face cent the blood surging up her neck. "I never wanted to know."

He sighed and rose heavily to his feet. "Maybe you're right. Reminiscing isn't so good. Instead of switching that poor ring around why not throw it away? Why, Ann! You're crying!"

In an instant he was on his knees, had gathered her quivering form close. "Ann—Ann—it was his best name for her—darling, don't leave like that, you'll wear yourself out! There done something terrible!" she sobbed.

He took her big handkerchief and wiped her eyes. "Sweetheart, we're both in a fix. Pull yourself together, dear, you're marrying me again to night. I don't want to take a woman to the altar who's crying her heart out."

But Ann, muddled up in her own straining confusion, hadn't heard. "Ronny, I couldn't get it on now—sorry. You provided beautifully. You actually spoiled me."

He stroked her hair. "The people aren't appreciated till they die!"

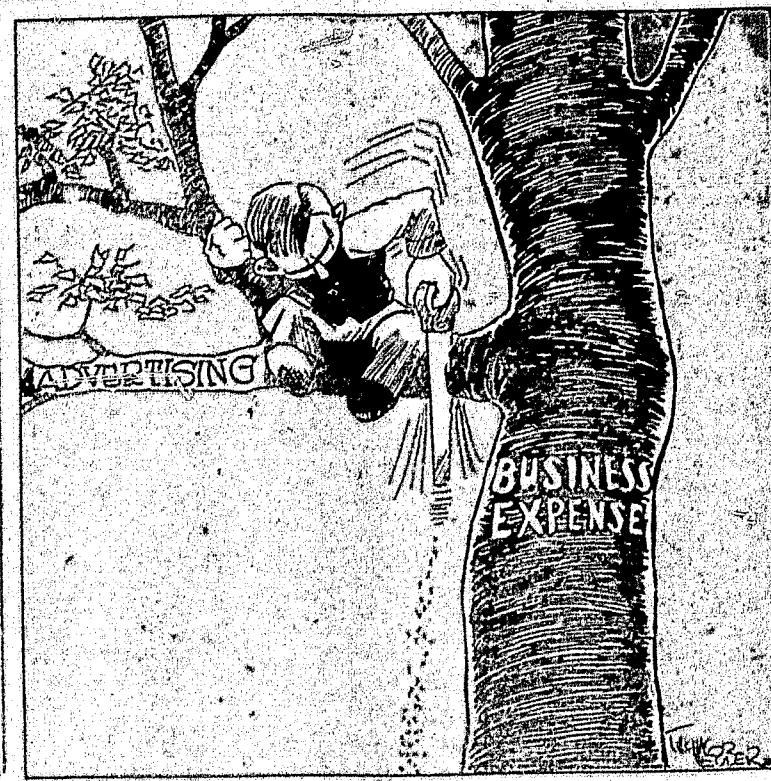

"I couldn't get it on cruelly! And I knew it wasn't another woman. Although I could have guessed that Gertrude's eyes the way she ogled you."

His voice was soothing. "She only ogled me, dearest, because I was the only artist who hadn't ogled her. Why did his honor take pity on you?"

She lifted her big eyes. "I went all the way to Reno, went through all the motions, and then— I couldn't accuse you unjustly, could I? And I couldn't make up anything but a lie, not about you, Ronny—so I didn't go through with it." She smiled. "Whatever you want to do now I'll abide by."

So Ronny, radiant and incredulous, took the slim wedding band from her right hand and put it where it belonged.

Hospital Bills Are Going to Be Plenty

THE D. S. BROOKS LETTER

Bethel, Maine, June 30, 1932.
To the Citizen Family.

Esteemed Friends:
Of two very recent and significant events, I will mention the first in my letter of today: the graduation of the Class of 1932—Gould Academy.

I am an enthusiast for education. Besides graduating from "Yarmouth" I have been a student of the following well-known schools: The Page-Davis School of Advertising, The International Correspondence Schools, and La Salle University.

I have been reviewing my files of The Citizen and have especially studied the printed photographs of the graduating class in the issue of June 16th.

Even a quick glance shows a very striking intelligence in the faces of the young men and women. But a closer study of each individual face reveals much more than ordinary intelligence. It is startling! The strong, youthful-professional, look bespeaks future greatness. There will be teachers, nurses, doctors, lawyers, bankers, merchants, a minister, a governor, and a president of the United States to come forth to bless the world. You, older people, mark my prediction. It's a very remarkable group of young folk, indeed. The parents should and must feel justly proud of these sons and daughters. I have many times addressed groups of young people, and secretly prophesied of each; and, have rarely missed in my predictions. What pleasure to talk to an interesting class of bright, young folk who look eagerly into your face, anticipating every word of your discourse, and receiving it with keen appreciation. One such occasion, in my early ministry, occurs to my mind. We arranged a special programme; and to make it more enjoyable we had the pleasure of being honored with Wilkey's Band to furnish music for a Sunday afternoon in our church. Space will not permit me to enter further into the interesting details which I would be pleased to relate. But, at another time we were highly honored with the privilege of preaching the baccalaureate sermon to a graduating class of most promising young men and women. Many of whom, we had personally trained in the catechism of the Church. These have since developed into splendid citizens of the town, of whom we are proud. I would ask the pardon of the pastors, but I cannot refrain from giving this bit of advice—you ministers of God, in the several towns where these graduates of Gould reside, have an unusual opportunity to reap a rich harvest of talent for your respective churches. Let not one of the thirty-eight members of this extraordinary class go untaught. It is, also, in this connection, very gratifying to me that many in town had the pleasure of meeting and hearing Prof. Brooks Quimby from Bates College—the evening guest of honor at the Gould reception. I am intimately acquainted with his family. The orator has an elder brother, Mr. Clarence Quimby, who for some years was president of Westbrook Seminary. The parents of these very able brothers reside in the town of Turner. They were both great church workers when my father preached on the old Livermore and Hartford charge. He added a part of Turner to his already large territory and conducted services at North Turner where Mr. and Mrs. Quimby then resided. When their second son was born, they named him "Brooks" in honor of my father. Many years afterward, when my youngest brother came, father remembered the honor conferred upon him by the Quimbys and named the child Paul "Quimby" Brooks. Thus, a double honor and a life-long friendship between our two families. Mrs. Althea D. Quimby, the mother of Clarence and Brooks, is now well advanced in years, but is yet the able president of the State W. C. T. U. A more efficient and determined worker in the cause of Temperance can never be found. The great Frances Willard, so cherished in memory by every member of The Woman's Christian Temperance League, would, were she living today, love and admire Mrs. Quimby. Taken all in all, the finest tribute to such noble womanhood as this Christian mother, in ancient literature, is that matchless paragraph in the Book of Proverbs, ascribed by the translators of our Bible to King Lemuel:

"A worthy woman who can find? For her price is far above rubies. The heart of her husband trusteth in her, and he shall have no lack of gain. She doeth him good and not evil all the days of her life. She seeketh wool and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands. She is like the merchant-ships; she bringeth her bread from afar. She riseth also when it is yet night, and giveth food to her household, and their task to her maidens. She considereth a field, and buyeth it; with the fruit thereof she planteth a vineyard; she girdeth her loins with strength, and maketh strong her arms. She perceiveth that her merchandise is profitable; her lamp goeth not out by night. She layeth her hands to the distaff, and her hands hold the spindle. She stretcheth out her hands to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy. She is not afraid of the snow for her household; for all her household are clothed with scarlet. She maketh for herself carpets of tapestry; her clothing is fine linen and purple. Her husband is known in the gates, where he sitteth among the elders of the land. She maketh linen garments and selleth them; and delivereth girdles unto the merchant. Strength and dignity are her clothing, and she laugheth at the time to come. She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and the law of kindness is on her tongue. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children rise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her saying: 'Many daughters have done worthily, but thou excellest them all. Grace is deceitful, and beauty is vain; but a woman that feareth Jehovah, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her works praise her in the gates.'

Concerning the age in which that paragraph was written, it is the most progressive piece of literature concerning womanhood that has ever been found by the hand of man. So when we desire to honor a great, noble woman like Mrs. Quimby, with a gem quotation from Scripture, we apply the foregoing as a tribute to her life.

Kindly watch for our sermon in the next issue of the Citizen.

Most sincerely yours,
D. S. Brooks.

JUDGMENT

"Who art thou that judgest another?" The psychologist will tell you that "the reason we recognize evil in another is because we possess it to a degree." It would seem that we might accept this as true in a general sense, though with quite definite exceptions. However, it is doubtful true that if the good in us predominates we will surely find good in nearly everyone. Whether it is true or not, it remains a fact that we hardly judge our fellow men in absolute justice. We know too little of each other. I sometimes find myself at a loss to express my thoughts that I may not be misunderstood and therefore be misjudged. It is as impossible to exactly express what we have in our hearts as to describe a patient afflicts us so that another can feel it. There are doubtless many beneath us in the religious, moral and special scale, who would outweigh by half if they were given our opportunities; and we might be lower than the lowest if subject to their temptations.

WIDE OPEN SPACES

By FANNIE HURST

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

ONE of those experiences that you read about in books came to Alonzo Meierberg when he was thirty-one, and on the up-plunge of a wave of success as a young surgeon that was carrying to the top of his profession.

He walked out of the office of one of his most distinguished confreres, his own suspicion of himself corrected. One of his lungs had a hole in it. Tuberculosis had him. The who was considered the most brilliant promising plastic surgeon in the city of New York, and that meant a life in America, was doomed. Thirty-one, and most probably that, for a period of years that was to have with the soaring of career.

Well, Meierberg was about as logical as the average intellectual would be in such conditions. He placed his trust before him, so to speak, in the alternative advantages remaining at his post, and dying and perhaps brilliantly, or go off to struggle for an existence might not be worth the living. With his mind, the latter alternative. But love of life was too strong in this man to go down before the argument of a sophisticated doctor.

In the end, Doctor Meierberg went to a shanty town of an altitude dryness necessary to his well-being, and there took up his abode. The wide open spaces. God's count. Back to nature.

Cactus Post was all those. A little town of a town situated on the slope of a mountain that hung between desert and snow-caps. The sun came in glory over Cactus Post and went in in magnificence. The air was dry, as thin-tasting, as sparkling, as fragrant and, every morning of his life, Doctor Meierberg awoke to the redly lovely chirping of birds did not know by name, and to the ringing sound of axes hurling in the wilderness of tree boles that the mountain side.

Glory hung over Cactus Post. Dawn-mornings. Peace-drenched noons. Long, somnolent afternoons with wind the doctor knew was benign before a pine wood fire that deeply up into the nostrils like a tickling elixir of a chertreuse. Sure for reading, that never before all his closely packed years of struggle and endeavor had the doctor ended. Boxes of books arrived from East almost weekly, and were not merely placed on a reading table to be read at some future time, but read, there and then.

The folks in Cactus Post were a jolly enough sort, too. Simple women and girls. Bred to the open spaces, these folks. Fine, the doctor thought, and yet it must be admitted that as months marched along and then years, such a nostalgia began to hold of the doctor that the heart him was almost as sore as his head. Lung had been.

Years of the coyote-riddled, night faces. The flaming sunrises ushered in the long, somnolent days. The gorgeous sunsets ushering them out. Solitary.

The old days began to gnaw at him. Using his eyes of an evening beside a book-stacked fireplace, the doctor would visualize things back home. The decadent-eyed city. Women who were a million years and three thousand miles alien to these husky, cat-eyed ones, wrapping themselves in furs and riding out into the spangled evening. The warm, vibrant flare of a along New York's Broadway. Men, staccato of theaters and concerts. The voice of the city. The warm, rising note of humanity. That was humanity. The doctor was lonesome to death. The wide, open spaces were so wide. Too open. Humanity was a charmed circle closing within it life and love and warmth and beauty. Most more than the doctor could bear. And yet, he knew that, somehow, he must stick it out for another year. He knew himself on the road to recovery but he dared not hasten his way along that road. Another year, what with careful living and habits, would see the spot on his lung healed. Another year!

Sometimes, during the passing of it, the doctor feared for his sanity. A dream of waiting. Terrible, terrible dream of waiting.

Then there was his sense of delirium and of actual fear of revealing a state of mind to the people about him. To the sweet-eyed Clarissa who rode in twelve miles on horseback to his shanty for him day by day and rode home through the purple, unspangled desert without fear. The cowboy the ranchers, the homesteaders who had been his good friends, he took him along on their jaunts to the heart of the universe. Who taught him the secret things of nature, and had been kind to him. Who were not to him.

It was unthinkable to let these good people know how the heart within him was a heavy thing.

Up to the very day of his departure for the East, he kept it from them. He did not the heart to tell them that his departure was final. That he was shaking the desert dust off his feet forever.

They had been good. Kind. Their delight in his cure was scarcely less than his own.

When he finally stepped into the rattling car that was to drive him the forty miles to the nearest station where he took his train, it was with the understanding that he was to return to them in the autumn. His shanty was to be there and waiting. His friends.

Like a sneak, the doctor turned his back on Cactus Post, knowing he had lied to them and yet had lied out of the kindness of his heart. The little group of them waving him goodbye. The fellows. Bless them. The handful of women in their calico who had been so kind to him. Mrs. Hodges, the general storekeeper's wife, who had nursed him through bronchitis. Sweet-eyed Clarissa who had tended him so faithfully. Bless them.

The city met him like a boom of ocean, a surf of humanity running and hissing up against his feet his first step off the train.

Bing. Boom. Bang. The heart leapt in his bosom. The eager, quick-footed men. There! The women in their furs and the beautifying wrappings that he had so missed. Even their painted faces! Gaiety was here. Pulse of life. The streets swam vivantly. Rush. Eagerness. Lights blazed. The hotel where he stopped had the warm, perfumed quality to it that reminded him of the bare shoulders of women and the whisper of furs.

Life! Vitality! Sophistication. Here were the men who made the universe go around. The women who made the universe matter.

The city caught him up once more. Goaded him. Spurred him. Within the month he was on the old treadmill again, straining, yearning, aspiring. The young doctor was back in the race. The profession which had practically forgotten him began to turn an eye upon him again.

The doctor was back again. Cured. In the race.

And after the first six months, it was borne in upon an amazed, a startled young doctor that the race no longer mattered. His work, the scientific curiosity that spurred him on, his love of it, could not be best pursued here in these marts of men.

The doctor had tasted of the beauty and the peace and the nobility of quiet. He missed the ring of axes into wood. The gibberish of birds against dawn. The clear voices of women calling through high, thin air. This was a roar. The lights of the theaters represented the cheap tarnished pastimes that people sought. People without the leisure or the nerves for quiet reading. People who must forever be jamming, pushing, seeking. In all the months since his return, he had not had one evening for quiet reading. The stack of books beside his bed was half a man high. Life had him once more. By the scarf of the neck. The painted faces of the women mocked him. Pallid faces gone flabby from lack of the simple things that had kept those calico-clad ones out there firm fleshed and bright eyed even by light of dawn.

The autumn came around. The color of asphalt in the city. The color of quartz and topaz and cornelian and ruby and lapis lazuli in Cactus Post.

The doctor knew! Knew it with his heart that was aching.

And so, come autumn, as he had promised, the doctor did return to his shanty, in Cactus Post. A sunset the color of the blood that must have been surging around his heart met him as he stepped out of the flickery tin automobile that had driven him the many miles from the station.

Clarissa of the sweet eyes met him, too.

The doctor had come home.

A Good Advertisement is an advertisement that has been carefully prepared and gives information about the goods offered for sale in an interesting and instructive way.

It isn't necessary to quote a cut price, to write an advertisement. In fact the majority of the good advertisements do not feature a cut price. They do show, however, that the article being offered for sale is worth the money asked for it and that it will be to the reader's distinct advantage to own it.

A well written advertisement influences readers until they want to buy. They want to buy the goods offered and they want to buy them from the merchant who advertises them.

A WELL WRITTEN ADVERTISEMENT IS A GOOD SALESMAN FOR THE MERCHANT WHO USES IT.
